

WHEAT BEARCATS AGAIN BEAT DUCHESS

The Wheat Situation
The Winnipeg wheat market has shown a slight rally of late, but on what all spring. There has been little independence of action. When Chicago was bullish, horses were coming in Winnipeg, and if Chicago receded, reaction developed in Manitoba's capital. This may be due to the fact as mentioned recently by Premier Bennett, that we are so integral part of North America. The United States has the makings of a domestic bullion situation with an abnormally small wheat crop and a government that is interested to raise prices even if it tears the hundred year old cowhide from its halloved monetary system in the process.

Things are different in Canada. There are about 215 million bushels of wheat in various positions, the great bulk of which is exportable surplus. The surplus is threatened with a record breaking carryover and a new crop is in the making with half already harvested. Of course the new crop is late and has to run the gamut of drought, hail, frost, grasshoppers, blight, and blight are loomed into the fields.

The world statistical position has shown little improvement, and the promised surplus of export has so far failed to materialize. The surplus will probably be another large world wheat carryover on August 1st. International trade has been comparatively small stream with no reduction of restrictions in importation by the part of Europe. Most European countries are producing with a very inferior quality of bread—not much better than do wheat. England is a notable exception. The bread in that country is the best quality product in the world. It has been using more Canadian wheat. Canadian wheat is little idea of the poor quality of the wheat. It has been using more Canadian wheat.

The brighter side: There is more hope of recovery than in the past; wheat; people are in a more optimistic mood. There is a decrease of some 10 million bushels in world wheat surplus. The London Economic Conference may do much toward restoring world trade. Many nations are getting to be dubious as to the advantages and policy of self contained autarkism. If recovery comes wheat will be sold along with other commodities. More wheat surplus will be sold to be shipped, aiming to restore the circulation of money. Free buying of wheat to restore depreciated reserves would soon take up quantities of wheat above surplus. Don't forget the Crowfoot softball team that is playing freely there will be little talk about surplus wheat.

Junior Also Wins Their Game
Bassano of New Two Wins Two Wins
Two Losses in League Game

Making it two straight over the Ducks, the Bassano Bearcats broke a 16-4 victory from Duchesne last Sunday afternoon.

The Bearcats now have an even record in league games, having won two and lost two.

The Bassano Juniors also brought home a victory, defeating the Ducks one boys 7-1 in a five inning contest. This makes three wins and one loss for the Juniors.

Duchesne started off strong by getting four runs in the first inning, but the Bearcats tied the count in the fourth and ran in five more runs in the sixth to clinch the game. After that first inning the Bears held Duchesne down to six scattered hits, and didn't allow another run to cross the plate. The southpaw Moorhead pitched the last inning without a hit. The Bassano players had a good day at bat. The veterans Rodhouse and LePage topped the hitting, slugging home runs by the latter. The other players were: Leonard, Pike, and Simpson all slugged home runs. The other players were: Leonard, Pike, and Simpson all slugged home runs.

CHARGE FOLLOWS TRUCK ACCIDENT

Calgary Truck Driver Faces Charge of Negligence
Mr. and Mrs. MacKinnon were killed by a truck on Crowfoot Hill.

As the result of a collision between a car and a truck on the Crowfoot hill last Thursday, June 1, a charge of negligence is being laid against the driver of the truck.

The case will come up in the Bassano court Saturday, June 10 at 11 a.m.

The car involved in the accident was owned by Alex. MacKinnon, Crowfoot elevator agent. Mrs. MacKinnon was badly shaken up and is suffering from shock.

Mr. and Mrs. MacKinnon were on their way to Cluny about 8 o'clock Thursday evening. As they descended the east slope of the Crowfoot hill they met Mr. MacKinnon, of Cluny, who was having difficulty in getting up the hill with his truck.

The truck was parked on the side of the road and got out to assist Mr. MacKinnon, leaving Mrs. MacKinnon in the car.

While waiting the driving man, Mr. MacKinnon, heard coming from the truck. The truck, which proved to be a Buick, was travelling very fast.

It descended the slope and struck Mrs. MacKinnon, knocking it about twenty feet distant and practically demolishing the car.

Mrs. MacKinnon was injured in the crash.

CEMETERY PIPE LINE INSTALLED

Ample Water Supply Assured for Burial of Trees and Shrubs
The new pipe line installed in the cemetery will ensure a constant supply of water for the trees and shrubs.

Town Engineer Frank Mead announced this morning (Thursday) that the new pipe line to the cemetery was nearly completed, and the finaling touches would be put on by Friday.

The pipe-line is connected to the town water main near the hospital and a two inch pipe runs east to the cemetery. This is considered sufficient to carry sufficient water to keep the trees and shrubs alive.

Cost of material was paid by the town. The pipe was laid by the town engineer making a trip to Calgary to have a close haul.

The pipe line is completed just in time to give the trees a much needed watering. Although the water is far from abundant, the pipe line is a great help to the town.

WHEAT CROP GETS MORE MOISTURE

Nice Stands of Wheat Seen in Field Near Bassano
Windy Weather Could Much Enrichment Before Rain Came

Rain Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of this week brought much precipitation to the growing wheat in the Bassano district.

The previous week of warm, windy weather had dried out the surface soil, and while there was still considerable moisture a depth, the farmers were beginning to worry.

The precipitation for the week amounted to 1.76 inches at Bassano, 1.76 inches at Calgary, and 1.76 inches at Edmonton.

The wheat crop is growing rapidly and some excellent stands of grain have been seen in the field.

Gardeners welcomed the rainfall, and the Gladys Fortney is now shooting up at a great rate.

Tax Consolidation Act In Force In Bassano

New Act Enables Ratepayers in Arrears to Pay Off in Installments
Over Six Year Period—Discounts Allowed With Penalties

The provisions of the Local Tax Arrears Consolidation Act have been put into force as applied to the Town of Bassano. It was decided at the council meeting last Monday evening, June 5.

It is a very important piece of legislation, and concerns all ratepayers whose taxes are more than a year in arrears.

The act provides for the payment of arrears in annual installments over a period of six years, before Dec. 1st. The first payment is due on the 1st of January, and amounts to 10 per cent of arrears; the second payment is 10 per cent, the third 10 per cent, the fourth and fifth 20 per cent, and the sixth is 20 per cent.

Substantial discounts are allowed on the payment of arrears if payment is made, the scale of discounts varying according to the number of years the arrears have been outstanding. The discount has the effect of wiping out the penalties which were added for non-payment of taxes.

Operation of the new legislation is of immediate interest to local ratepayers who are in arrears. It provides for the payment of arrears in installments, and for the payment of arrears in installments, and for the payment of arrears in installments.

CHICAGO PLAINS

The "Century of Progress" Chicago's world fair, is causing some thing of a fars-up in the great metropolis of the American midwest.

Chicago teachers gave the fair a black eye in a demonstration against non-payment of a year's arrears of wages. The "Century of Progress" banner in Grand Park was hauled down and a banner reading "The Century of Progress" was hoisted in its place.

The Chicago fair shows the progress of the world in science and mechanics, but conditions in Chicago forcefully demonstrate lack of progress in the social order of things. The same condition exists in every civilized country of the world.

In Chicago there are thousands of unemployed; the city is broke, and school teachers and other civic employees have received no wages for months. That is the "Century of Progress" is being held in a city where such conditions exist is the height of irony.

To see the wonders of Occar America, we are living in the airplane age, and we are governed by the occult arts.

GETTING A "BRAIN"

Once in a while a farmer gets a break. I haven't happen very often in these times, but it does happen occasionally.

Take the case of the Alberta farmers who could not get their grain threshed last fall because of wet weather. Some farmers in the Wintering Hills district north of Huxley were in this position.

The grain stood in the fields all winter, and threshing was attempted this spring. More wet weather caused further delays, and threshing was not completed until just a few days ago.

But the dark cloud had a silver lining, and the farmer was well repaid for his delay. The spring threshed grain graded practically the same as that threshed last fall, and the price was considerably higher than it was seven months ago.

The set-back last fall turned out to be a real break for the farmer with unthreshed grain, but it was a little bit of worrying during the winter months.

RESTRICTION OF WHEAT PRODUCTION

Restriction of wheat acreage by the great wheat producing countries proposed as a means of raising grain prices has so far found favor in only one of the countries concerned—the United States, Canada, Australia, and Argentina are not enamored of the idea.

The Canadian prairie farmer grows the best wheat in the world, and he is the largest exporter in the world. He produces wheat of which is desired by millers for the manufacture of the finest flour.

The quality of his wheat is unsurpassed and stands high above the grain raised in the other great wheat exporting countries.

In normal times the Canadian wheat producer possesses a distinct advantage over his rivals in other countries due to this high quality of grain. He is also at an advantage in having the best equipment for wheat production and the best grain handling facilities, enabling him to raise wheat at low cost.

Artificial restriction of wheat production is a very risky business. Controlled production of copper, rubber, and coffee will not fail. Can it be done with wheat?

Controlled wheat production would naturally meet with opposition from the wheat importing countries who would object to artificially raised prices and stimulate greater production in those countries, thus defeating the purpose of controlled acreage.

There is certainly a great disparity in the price of grain and the price of manufactured goods in the world, and it would be easier to bring the price of manufactured goods down to the low levels of farm products.

European countries have erected formidable tariff barriers against imported wheat in their order to bolster up prices for their own grain producers. Were these restrictions removed trade would resume a normal level and wheat exporting countries would not be faced with large surplus stocks and low prices.

Perhaps a way out of the difficulty will be found at the World Economic Conference.

ALBERTA COAL FOR ONTARIO

The latest effort to market Alberta coal in Ontario is announced in a reduction of $1.25 per ton in the freight rate of Alberta coal shipped to the eastern province. The new rate is $6.50 a ton.

The geographical location of Alberta's vast coal wealth, far from the Ontario market, is the greatest drawback to the development of the coal mining industry in this province. It constitutes a problem which has so far baffled solution.

The great difficulty is the long and costly rail haul from mine to market. The new freight rate may bring about some increase in business to Alberta coal operators, but the measure is not a permanent one and the industry cannot expect to benefit greatly by it.

The great distance from western mines to eastern markets is a great geographical barrier which is unassailable. Alberta's coal industry will not enjoy great expansion until the west becomes more thickly populated and a wider market opened for its products.

Childhood Days

BIG TASK FACES STATEMENT

AT ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

LONDON, June 6.—(Reuters) A vast effort to regulate human affairs by means of international conference will meet its supreme test at the World Economic Conference at London.

If it succeeds it may re-establish the waning faith of the nations in the theory of internationalism which centres in the League of Nations.

It fails it may well be the last effort of the kind for years. Failure will be claimed as a victory by the growing number of nations who have gone back to the old policy of individual nations which are opposed to co-operative action.

The 1918 conference and conferences have been held to clear up the mess of the Great War. With two possible exceptions—the Washington conference of 1922, and the Lausanne conference last year—only the most meagre advantages have been gained, and many can be found to assert that the net result of all these gatherings has only been to make confusion worse confounded.

It is argued not without justification that the financial and economic chaos of the world today is such that no nation can afford to contemplate failure at the London conference. The unfortunate fact is that as far as Europe is concerned, economics have become inextricably entangled with politics. It is the problem of the London conference to untangle this anxious tangle; to make the economic machine work, unencumbered by political considerations rooted in racial hatreds and ethnological divergences.

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT

IS NOTED IN WEST

QUEBEC, June 6.—Canada and the west have emerged from economic tribulation to a period of definite hope arising from the aggressive policy of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the United States and the public works of the approaching world economic conference, said M. E. K.

President of the Winnipeg Tribune and president of the Canadian Press. In an interview today, sky high tariffs being maintained by the United States, which was largely responsible for clogging the machinery of commerce the world over, and it was to be expected among more sensible ideas would be one of the first results of the conference, said Mr. Nichols.

Conditions in western Canada are very satisfactory and generally better than they have been for some time, continued Mr. Nichols. He said the Canadian west has had less depression and fewer demonstrations than in the United States since the depression began, and that crop conditions were also improved.

OLD COUNTRY OPTIMISM

DIVIDED ON WAR DEBTS

LONDON, June 6.—All Europe agreed on the question of the war debt payment due the United States next week. If Britain defaults, it will be the first time since 1918 that a European nation has failed to pay its war debt.

Confidential sources of the British press said that the British government will abandon procrastination and default by default.

If Britain pays, they may continue efforts to compromise without actual repudiation. France is already in default with small likelihood of making up its arrears, and Germany has announced her intention of following suit, ultimately.

Under this black shadow of uncertainty preparations for the World Economic Conference proceed while the nations have constantly before them the statement of league experts that "war debts will remain the heaviest barrier to economic and financial reconstruction."

Britain is sharply divided on the question. There courses lie before the country, default, payment in full, or a "write-off" payment of a few millions as acknowledgement of the debt.

Bankers are almost solidly opposed to payment, even many who support the December payment.

REDUCED FREIGHT RATE ON ALBERTA COAL TO ONTARIO

TOBACCO, June 6.—Plans for a reduced freight rate for a substantial portion of Ontario's domestic fuel requirements are believed to have been approved by the Alberta operators today following receipt of advice of a new freight rate of $5.50 a ton on coal shipped from Alberta to Ontario.

Notwithstanding the fact the drop in rates has been nullified to some extent by a cut in attractive prices, Alberta, according to operators' representatives here, is looking forward to a good coal market in Ontario this year.

Advises were received yesterday by the Alberta trade commission for the new rate, which becomes effective June 8. The rate, $1.25 lower than last year, has prevailed for some time, will have, in the belief of officials, "a stimulating effect on the coal movement from the west to this province during the coming season."

TEN PER CENT TARIFF

ON IMPORTED CIGARETTES

S.S. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT at sea, June 6.—A bill for a ten per cent tariff on imported cigarettes was disclosed officially Monday by the United States delegation as an idea being strongly pushed for action at the forthcoming World Economic Conference in London.

A spokesman for the group headed by Mr. Roosevelt, who heard this bill, expressed the belief that such a tariff would be proposed and achieved at the conference opening next Monday. If this alone resulted in the tariff being adopted, the conference would not be a failure.

DRY LAW REPEAL GAINING

GROUND IN THE U. S.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The movement for repeal of the 18th amendment, which prohibits the sale of alcoholic liquors, is gaining momentum in the United States. A spokesman for the group headed by Mr. Roosevelt, who heard this bill, expressed the belief that such a tariff would be proposed and achieved at the conference opening next Monday. If this alone resulted in the tariff being adopted, the conference would not be a failure.

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN RED CROSS ASSOCIATION AND LIFE-INSURANCE COMPANIES OF CANADA

THE ENEMY AMONG US

Those who are familiar with the fact that the enemy is among us, will remember the experiments while carried out on the old. He demonstrated that when their body temperature was lowered the fowl fell victim to a host of ailments, which under ordinary conditions, they were able to resist.

This experiment illustrates the fact that the body is rendered susceptible to disease germs by adverse conditions, such as prolonged chilling.

Many illnesses are arbitrarily dated back to a chill of the body. "Be careful of the draught!" "Wrap yourself up warmly!" are familiar injunctions given in every household. However, science is lower.

temperature is not the sole cause of illness, for, in communicable diseases, the specific germ must be present if the disease is to develop. A few things are necessary to effect, as far as is humanly possible, the development of an infection. The individual should avoid chilling, secure abundant rest and sleep, and establish himself on a good dietary regime. The avoidance of contact with any communicable disease is necessary precaution.

The meeting, coughing and expectorating individuals is found in every office and workshop, on every street car and in every public place. It is an individual who prides himself on twenty, thirty, or even more years of service without sick leave. Such a simple thing as "a touch of flu" must not interfere with a record so enviable despite the fact that, his fellow workers and traveling companions are the innocent victims of his over zealous though misguided efforts to duty.

Real devotion to duty in such an instance lies in the avoidance of co-workers and other members of the community from communicable diseases. A communicable disease is a social community problem, and in just as much a problem as a social problem of fire or other preventable calamity.

The individual, as a member of a community, thus plays a part in the prevention of disease. Generally better health should be contract a communicable disease, and the individual should take the necessary precautions. The simple precautionary measures, he not only jeopardizes his own health, but also that of his community. A contributory factor to the problem is the lack of knowledge of the individual concerning health.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

HANDLING SWEET CLOVER

FOR HAY CHOP

The best time to cut sweet clover is when the buds are just beginning to bud. On no account should the cutting be delayed after the flowers begin to appear over the field. After sweet clover has reached the flowering stage the seed and leaves become woody and increasingly unpalatable as a feed for stock.

In cutting sweet clover for hay the first crop should be cut high enough to permit a second crop. This growth does not come from the roots of the plant as would be the case with alfalfa, but from buds or branches on the stem. Care must be observed, therefore, to cut the crop high enough to leave some of these buds to start a second growth. In a thick, heavy growth of sweet clover, sometimes some of the lower branches have died through lack of sunlight, so it is necessary to make sure that the buds and branches which are left are living.

As a rule cutting at a height of five or six inches from the ground is quite safe, although it is occasionally necessary to cut somewhat higher.

The simplest and most satisfactory way of cutting sweet clover for hay is by means of the blader, haking the sheaves small and somewhat loose. The sheaves should be stacked in long narrow stacks running north and south. Even with good weather curing is rather slow. Should weather be avoided at it is may prove dangerous to stock. Stacking should be done in the same way as cut sheaves, preferably under, and in long narrow stacks. Sweet clover hay does not turn well so the stacks should be topped with grass hay.

Sweet clover hay may be put up quite well in the ordinary way, cutting with a mower instead of a blader. There is, of course, a greater loss of leaves which is undesirable. It is usually necessary to have adjustable rollers fitted under the shoes to raise the outer bag of the mower higher. The hay should be left in the swath until it is thoroughly wilted but not dry, after which it should be raked into windrows, or better still, made into small stacks or shocks. When the sweet clover is made reasonably well in the cocks, are made small enough, the cocks may be made into stacks.

Had Another Job

Back in the '90s, a noted physician, a teacher in a London medical school, was named a member of the staff of a hospital at Buckingham Palace. Explaining why he could no longer conduct his classes, the doctor wrote his message on the blackboard:

"Dr. Black regrets he can no longer meet his classes, as he has this day been appointed a physician to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria!"

Beneath this announcement some student wrote later with "God save the Queen."

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

One bleak November day Joyce Ashton, brook stenographer, was in a waiting taxi in Chicago. The thing she remembered was two years later when she woke one morning to find herself in a luxurious home in California, with a wedding ring on her hand, and a pleasant young man addressing her as Prilla, telling her to be careful after her fall from her horse of the day before. Her husband was Neil Packard, fruit packer. Confused and troubled, she tried to find out more about herself and from letters in her desk found that she had been a heartless, frivolous young woman and had been involved in a serious affair with a man named Maitland. Later, when he came to see where he was hurt and surprised when she tried to replace him, he had finally left her. Now go on with the story.

"I don't care who comes, I'm going out," she decided yesterday. "On a glorious day like this it would be serious sitting indoors. If this isn't a pleasant change from Philadelphia in November! It's all so marvellous!"

She went down to the dining room beautifully, carefully, whether or not it had been Prilla's custom to appear so early.

After her serving, breakfast, Rosalind, inquired, "Will you be home for dinner, Mrs. Packard?"

"Marcia would like to know if there will be any guests, and how many guests, and what you've come to order."

"Yes, I'll be here for dinner, but I'll be alone. And tell Marcia to have anything at all, it doesn't matter what, just so I don't have to decide myself."

She went out immediately into the garden and made her way around the dining room, the garage, sniffing delightedly at the exotic fragrances of the roses.

She was amused to notice a head of duck, back behind the kitchen, "I just know they're wondering what can be better than Prilla," she thought, smiling. "Well they'll have to keep wondering."

Hope at least they won't find the new-Owl, there's something I would like it that's the Sam! Neil mentioned.

"He looks young and somehow not an ordinary servant," she thought as she approached. "I wish he'd look up. Shall I say good-morning to attract his attention? I don't dare call him Sam till I'm sure he is Sam."

Her impression that he was not an ordinary servant was confirmed when the young man suddenly turned around, and seeing her, broke off his whistling and was alarmed. "Good morning, Mrs. Packard!"

"Good. He's glad to see you too. How are you? Fed all right?"

"He's glad, though, de-fen-tel-ent, though, had nothing serious in it. He spoke in an easy manner, as if he were of varying social levels had never disturbed him."

"Oh, yes, I'm all right," replied Joyce, feeling relieved that this was what he was after. "I had expected, I did get a kind of bad crack on the head, though it's better today. Is Fire Queen in the stable?" (she had one thing to thank Maitland for—he had told her the name of the horse).

"There was just the hint of a grin on the young man's face as he answered, Mr. Packard gave orders before he left for me to take her over to MacReddy's ranch yesterday."

"Oh," Joyce frowned, not, as Sam probably thought, in anger at this news, but in baffled amazement at how close and considerate he was before he dared make it.

Mr. Packard had been bringing Rosalind from MacReddy's for you in case you want to ride. She's in the stable as a kitten, lively as without the mean streak of Fire Queen. Fancied me to saddle her up!"

Paraphrased with a plausible excuse for not riding, this would have been to Joyce, "I don't think I'll take any more riding," "no, if I can't have Fire Queen, I won't ride."

"Well, I got tired of those jazy cokes myself after a bit," said Sam frankly. "I don't like good car. Shall I back her out for you?"

"No, thanks. I'm not going out today," she still lingered, however, as if she were not quite sure of her decision.

Suddenly she remembered something she had wanted, and forgetting everything else, she asked eagerly, "Do you know where I could get this?"

"This time the astonishment on Sam's tanned face was so unmistakable that Joyce realized that she had at last surprised him."

"But go, Mrs. Packard, I thought you didn't like to go," he exclaimed.

"Well, I've changed my mind," returned Joyce, embarrassed.

"I'll get you a good car," said Sam, seemed to take her answer as a rebuke.

"Well, I don't know exactly what I do want," said Joyce uncomfortably, wishing she had given the matter more thought before getting into this way.

"Why don't you go to the Allen Kennels and pick out something you like?" suggested Sam, after a moment.

"I don't want to be bothered," she replied, hoping this would sound enough like the expirations Prilla to cause him to get one some where around here, so I can have it."

"Well, I know a dog I think I could get you," exclaimed Sam, and, "It's the quiet little white and black Boston bull you ever saw. It's a beauty and smart as a whip. Belongs to people named March. They're going to Chicago to have me see if I can get him for you."

"Oh, yes, do," said Joyce. "Do you want... I had you better write a cheque."

"I don't think they'll take any money. They'll be glad to find good home for the dog."

"Get him as soon as you can, will you?" asked Joyce, smiling at Sam gratefully. "I'm crazy to see him. Now that I have decided to have a car, I want him right away."

"Sure, I'll go right away, Mrs. Packard. I was just going to drive down to get the dog's order."

Joyce wished she might ride with him while he got his errands, but realizing the inadvisability of such an outing she turned away reluctantly and went back to the house where she found that the morning mail had arrived. She sorted out the ones addressed to "Mrs. Neil Packard" and carried them down to the far end of the garden to a secluded corner hidden from the house.

The first one was a short note, carefully scrawled in a handwriting she seemed to have seen before. "Sorry you didn't feel like seeing any of the gang, honey. I have sent this along longer. Thank God, Neil is away for some time. I can't get over your look this morning. Prilla. Call me up tomorrow, dearie, C."

"This is the same 'C' who wrote about the house party," thought Joyce, "and it must be the Mrs. Enery who telephoned yesterday."

The next letter on heavy masculine handwriting began "Dear Baby."

Joyce grinned to herself at this poetic opening. "How lovely!" she murmured, sarcastically, and read on with interest.

"I'm sitting in my room at the window that faces where you are, and think of you as hard that I can't settle to anything else. I'm bitterly disappointed that I can't be with you as the devil. You've been living for it all day, and now I'm lonely as this minute, now and then, I'm better tomorrow afternoon, sweetheart. I thought I'd see you all to our different moods. You had no guessing today, I never felt so puzzled about you before. You seemed to have slipped away from me entirely. I can't quite get it. It makes me restless now and I'm tempted to get to you tonight in the middle of everything. I'll be worried until I find you looking more like yourself."

"Why are you keeping me off like this? I'm pretty worried at writing. I don't know how to help you. I'm with you again I'm going to tell you all over again—and demonstrate."

"How I adore you, I wish you wouldn't call me up right away? I want to know how you get and how you feel now. All my love to Mrs. Prilla, from her adoring Mait."

"Too much fervor," murmured Joyce critically. She felt only a detached sort of disgust, as if she were reading a vulgar love letter addressed to another, she shook the letter impatiently. "And her passion is wasted on me, Mr. Maitland!" she said aloud.

"Well, let's see what else I have here. After Mait's passionate composition everything else will seem tame."

The next letter made her sit up in a jerk. There was no address, and Joyce hastily turned the envelope over and examined the postmark curiously. "New York, N. Y." She finally made out.

"An angel, peculiar handwriting in pale ink the astonishing letter read: 'My dear Florence. Although you seem to lack interest in hearing about the baby, I feel it no less than my duty to keep you informed of her health. She is a most engaging little mite, showing, even at her tender age, a decided personality and charm.'

"Although truth compels me to admit that you are probably not the best most suitable person to bring up a child, still I cannot understand how you can possibly feel that the sort of pleasure which ill your life are more important, more satisfying than the care and bringing up of this dear little baby. I will send you a few lines each month. Please extend my faithful greeting to Neil, Sophie."

Joyce read the letter, which flowed along without a single paragraph to break its unbroken, sentences. The significance of its contents came as such an unexpected blow that she felt weak and shaken.

"A baby! It can't be true! I never even heard of this! Could Prilla have had a baby in that time?"

"No, no, yes, it could have happened," the baby by now could be as much as five or six months old. Oh dear, oh dear, to think of me having a baby—

"She read and read the letter again and again trying to realize the incredible fact that the Joyce Ashton was a mother.

Joyce glanced up and saw a man coming down the path toward her. She took a deep breath to restore courage and looked over with surprising calm as she hastily put the letter aside.

"She is a beauty," agreed Joyce with enthusiasm

"I'm at!" Instead she answered, "I'm not going out today, but I'd like to see her."

"Sure, I'll bring her out," and Sam disappeared into the stable where he heard him speaking in low cheerful tones with a soothing note in his voice. Some was a nice young man, but she fancied he had looked a little disappointed at the quiet way she received the news of her horse.

Sam came out leading a daintily stepping chestnut mare, with a white star on her forehead. She mustered against Sam's shoulder with her soft nose, while he explained to Joyce, "Rosita's always been a pet at MacReddy's and she's used to being made much over, aren't you, baby?" He stroked her fondly, pushing her off when she playfully nipped his sleeve. "Here, get out, girl, pick on some one else, I tell you. Just show me that! Look at her lines, she hasn't got a fault anywhere."

"She is a beauty," agreed Joyce with enthusiasm, coming close and peering at the horse's neck timidly. "She looks as gentle as can be."

"You told Joyce, wondering whether Prilla would have been disgusted with this very wildness."

"Sure she does," agreed Sam, "but say, get on her, and she's got all the lines you want and don't you forget it. Say, that mare's got one of the fastest trots of any horse, and the smoothest canter you ever saw."

Joyce stepped back a little. In spite of Rosita's good character, she seemed almost comical big and she had a foolish fear of being stepped on suddenly. She lingered in the stable, looking at the mare's head and the white star on her forehead. There was a varnished wooden stallion vase, a drive, very sporty looking with brilliant canary yellow body and black wheels. The upholstery was bright. The world of shiny nickel about it. Joyce found it was a thing like that, thought Joyce.

"You're returning at the moment, caught right at her expression. He looked puzzled as he asked, 'What's the matter, Mrs. Packard? Anything wrong with the car?'"

"Nothing, except that it's all wrong," retorted Joyce, continuing to smile. She felt Rosita's tail as she told him what she really thought about it.

It's the Money You Spend Wisely That Counts

Someone has suggested that a rich man has more fun keeping a budget than a man of moderate means. Because the money he saves is tangible, he says, it can't be lost. And it is to work. Be that as it may, a budget is an invaluable help to anyone.

A budget helps you keep the right proportions between expenses, prevents you from spending more than is best for food and rent, or crimping more than you should on entertainment and luxury. But a budget is not a reason for getting cheap things, things in which you forfeit quality by attempting to save on price. A budget says to you: "Here is the amount of money you should spend for this. Spend all of it, but don't spend more. And it is up to you to get the best that can be got for that amount."

The person who spends his money wisely, who likes to get the most for it, always finds out from advertisements how he can spend it to the best advantage.

It is surprising how much money wisely you can buy if you make a habit of reading advertising. A little more value here... a little better workmanship there... in this thing slightly more durability... that product perhaps a bit finer. And even a little more money you spend for a higher quality of goods and a standard of excellence that is nationally recognized.

Everybody Welcome

"Good-Bye Uncle Jock"

Said Vera Plick, (left) and Lyette Teppas, as they shook hands with Captain E. G. Latta, and left the Canadian Pacific Hotel Empress of Britain at Father Point, Quebec, to make an aeroplane dash to Montreal on their way to Chicago where they were to be the selection of a "Queen of the Century of Progress Exposition."
No matter what the contest results Vera and Lyette will carry memories of a thrilling first voyage home with them. The Empress of Britain, one of the world's fastest liners, broke two records for speed, and a combination of fast ship, fast plane and fast train gave the two pretty girls the distinction of making the fastest voyage from London and Paris to Chicago ever recorded.
They travelled so fast all the way that Miss Teppas, who lunched in Paris, Friday, May 18, found herself breakfasting less than six days later in Chicago, May 25. Miss Plick's record was from breakfast to breakfast. Canadian Pacific officials arranged every detail of their entire journey, which, with the exception of two hours of city minutes in the air, used the facilities of that organization.
